TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 10.

In an address in New York, last Saturday,

"Pure Liquors."

Mr. Eli Johnson, of Brooklyn, a travelled disciple in the temperance crusade, presented as array of facts, figures and practical illustrations, from specimens at hand of the mode adopted by liquor dealers in manufacturing their goods, He related how a well known liquor dealer in this city, famous as an importer of the unadul terated article, had died, and not a single bill of lading attesting the importation of liquors was found among his papers; but in his cellar there were discovered numerous evidences as to how his imported article was manufactured by a precess purely domestic. He mentioned a case where a prominent man in Brooklyn had offered $50 for a pint of genuine brandy. The offer had remained open for a long time, and had not yet been answered. The speaker mentioned instances where there was no hops nor malt in beer, and stated that when it was turned on the sidewalk it made a black surface, difficult to be erased. He read extracts from Captain Cotter's book, showing how a liquor saloon could be supplied with a variety of liquors for the sum of $25. It is notorious that drummers for liquor houses no longer carry with them samples of their goods, but instead samples of essential oils and drugs, and recipes for the manufacture of liquors from poisonous chemicals. He ex-hibited from a tin box ounce vials containing essential oils of brandy, rum, gin, whiskey, sherry, Madeira and port wines and other liquors, each of which was capable of producing twenty gallons of the so-called imported article. Mr. Johnson (who looks like a well cared for, retired liquor merchant, and has evidently touched the bottom of his subject), gave his experience in London, where, of all things pure, liquors and beer are supposed to be the purest, and showed by extracts from works published there, generally in secret, how French brandy was manufactured without seeing France; how a vial of the essential oil of gin could make forty gallons of the liquid without a drop of gin in it; how sherry and claret were made by simply using the essential oil of one or the other; how port wine, prescribed so universally in England for sickness and used at the sacrament, was concected out of the oil of port, which never saw Portugal; how rare old English beer, por-ter, ale and other reputed to be malt liquors were manufactured out of the essential oil of each, with a liberal infusion of coculus indicus, an article of a poisonous character. He asked a London dealer in these essential oils whether it was not unlawful to sell them. The vender replied that it was not contrary to law to sell a thing not injurious. "But," said the speaker, "take a teaspoonful of either of the ingredients necessary to make the complete essential oil, and it will kill the strongest man in the city

He mentioned oil of vitriol, oil of almouds, spirits of wine, &c., as among the compounds. So dangerous are these ingredients in their separate forms that one London house engaged in the manufacture of the oils for over a hundred years has printed directions in regard to the manner of mixing them, with special instructions that none but practical or regular rectifiers should undertake the operation, for a few drops one way or the other might lead to fatal consequences. Mr. Johnson mentioned the case of a well known physician in this city who manufactured his own liquors by this process, and everything went along very well until Alexandria Iron & Brass Works one morning he was found dead in his room, with his throat cut, having committed suicide in a fit of delirium tremens. The essential oil of almonds, ten drops of which will kill, is used to put that "bead" on liquors which is so much admired by moderate drinkers and connoisseurs. Mr. Johnson said hop essences are great es sentials in English beer manufacture. They were used to such an extent as would be searce ly credited by those unacquainted with the business. Belfast, in Ireland, was celebrated for its pure port wine; but one of the principal importing houses, so called, never im ported a gallon. It was all manufactured un-Where he is propared to furnish all kinds of MACHINERY, WROHGHT and CAST REPAiring done with dispatch, and at prices that were charged previous to the war. jan 20 own country California wine makers are giving up the manufacture because they can produce the article much cheaper by means of drugs. He showed how a three dollar bottle of brandy could be made for twenty five cents, and con cluded by averring that people did not drink brandy because it was brandy, whiskey because t was whiskey, wine because it was wine; but because each had alcohol as its base. He would have the sale of alcohol regulated like the sale of arsensic and intrusted to only responsible hands.
